Distance Education

Distance Education at Ventura College

Ventura College offers convenient, expanded access to higher education and learning opportunities via distance education. Students can take online courses and partially online courses (or hybrid courses). Distance education means instruction in which the instructor and student are separated by distance and interact through the assistance of communication technologies. Distance Education courses are ideal for independent, self-directed, and motivated students who have functional computers and have access to broad band internet or high speed internet. Distance Education has become a common learning method for students who are seeking to achieve their educational goals. In fact, nearly 27 percent of all California community college students will take a class offered through distance education this year (CCC Chancellor's Office, 2015).
