Construction Technology Program Webpage:

A screenshot of a web browser displaying the Ventura College Construction Technology webpage. The browser's address bar shows the URL: www.venturacollege.edu/departments/academic/construction-technology. The page content includes a title, a descriptive paragraph, contact information for the Area Dean, Administrative Assistant, and Chair, a list of degrees and certificates offered, a list of links, and a list of meeting minutes for the Construction Technology Advisory Committee. A photograph of a building's interior structure is visible on the right side of the page.

Ventura College Construction Technology:

The Construction Technology program at Ventura College is over 40 years old. The program was founded as a means to help educate and train builders and inspectors along the central California coast. The courses are designed for beginning students as well as working professionals. Our emphasis is on helping to train qualified construction managers and industry craftsmen. There are two programs: Building Inspection and Construction Management. Job opportunities in both fields are excellent. Students can enroll into an individual class in order to develop specialized skills, or complete a one-year Certificate of Achievement program, or complete a two-year Associate of Science degree.
